1. The Communists recently printed anti-Czechoslovak pamphlets in Bratislava and shipped them to Vienna. There they were signed as though they came from Ferdinand Durcansky, and then sent back to members of the Slovak Democratic Party in Slovakia.
2. Shortly after the pamphlets were delivered, the houses of the Slovak Democrats were searched by Department VII of the Slovak Commission of the Interior, and the inhabitants were arrested when the pamphlets were found.
3. When the printer of the pamphlets heard of the situation, he went to Department VII and stated that he had printed them on orders from Colonel Rasla, brother of the Slovak Communist prosecutor at the trial of Monsignor Tiso. He was told by Department VII to keep this a secret.
